

Kori J. Stroub is a Senior Research Analyst with the Houston Education Research Consortium at Rice University, and a doctoral candidate in Education Policy at the University of Texas at Austin. He holds an M.A. in Experimental Psychology from the College of William & Mary, and a B.A. in Anthropology from the University of California at Santa Barbara. Kori's work investigates the causes and consequences of educational inequalities. He is particularly interested in the mechanisms through which educational policies, such as school choice, impact the educational opportunities and outcomes of students from different racial/ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds. In addition, Kori is committed to working directly with district policymakers to produce actionable research that balances the imperative goal of equity with the practical, often complex demands of educational agencies.
